A Note from Pastor Liza: Reflecting on 25 Years since 9/11

Beloveds,

25 years ago today, September 11th, 2001, was my first day of 10th grade. I remember my fellow 15 year olds gossiping by the lockers about something hitting a building, the TVs being on in whatever classrooms had TVs, teachers and dorm parents trying to hold their own faces steady. And I remember the line — a line of kids stretching toward the landline phone in the student lounge (Back then most 15-year-olds didn't have phones!), each one just needing to hear a parent's voice, just needing to know: are you okay?

Another thing I remember is the fear held by my friends of color - kids just like me who, unlike me, wondered, will I be blamed for this? I remember a friend who stopped wearing hijab, even though she had proudly started wearing it a couple of years before. I remember another reminding each of us that she was Hindu, not Muslim.

Every one of us carries a version of that morning — where you were, who you needed to call, what you learned that day about how fragile safety is. Some of you weren't yet born, and this day is not a memory but a story you've been told.

Scripture does not rush past grief. "For these things I weep... for a comforter is far from me" (Lamentations 1:16) is permission to stay inside sorrow rather than perform our way past it. And Paul's promise still holds: nothing—"neither death, nor life... nor anything else in all creation"—can separate us from the love of God (Romans 8:38-39). That verse doesn't explain what happened twenty-five years ago. Nothing does. But it holds us in our unexplained grief.

Theologian and writer Kate Bowler is one of my favorite authors on grief. She reminds us: "So often the experiences that define us are the ones we didn't pick." None of us chose that Tuesday morning. And yet it shaped us — our sense of safety, our tenderness toward strangers, our understanding of how quickly ordinary mornings can turn. Grief like this doesn't resolve; it integrates. It becomes part of the shape of a life.

So as we remember, let us hold our grief and one another's griefs with tenderness. Let us ask, what did that day teach you about love? May we hold our stories gently, and each other's with care. And may the God who meets us in the depths meet us also in the remembering.

With love,
Pastor Liza

And that's just during worship!

After worship we'll have our traditional homecoming luncheon with the added bonus of a congregational meeting! Church Leadership will present the two by laws revisions that were tabled at Annual Meeting and workshopped over the summer.

For You, From You: Notes from Members.

A reflection from Center Church Member, Tim Otte, on the death of poet and activist Wendell Berry:

"When Wendell Berry read his poetry at Trinity College Poetry Center in the 1980's, I met him when he ate at my restaurant. Before meeting him and since then, he has been one of the moral underpinnings of my philosophy of Christian Socialism/Capitalism."

"The Berry Center and Berry family are heartbroken to announce the death of Wendell Erdman Berry, writer and farmer of Port Royal, Henry County, Kentucky. He passed suddenly and peacefully at home yesterday afternoon, August 31st," the statement read.

"His work continues, here and in every place where people aim to live according to nature's measure, on and with and of their beloved home place" (from Sojourners Magazine)

"His writing has sometimes been called radical, but he thinks of himself as a conservative, conserving what is most human in our landscapes and ourselves," the journalist and artist Paul Trachtman wrote in a 2005 Smithsonian magazine profile of Mr. Berry.

"You know," the story quoted Mr. Berry as saying, "if you subtracted the Gospels and the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence from my work, there wouldn't be very much left" (From the New York Times).
